Marching towards Amrit Kaal with Science, Technology and Innovation

Science festivals are rich expressions of a nation's cultural importance and progress in science and technology. The science festivals aim to engage citizens with science in inspirational and empowering ways, attracting younger generations toward the world of science and technology.

In India, India International Science Festival (IISF) ignites curiosity and makes learning more rewarding. It is a crucial way to make young people interested in acquiring new knowledge, asking questions, and starting the quest to accomplish goals and create the next generation's science ambassadors.

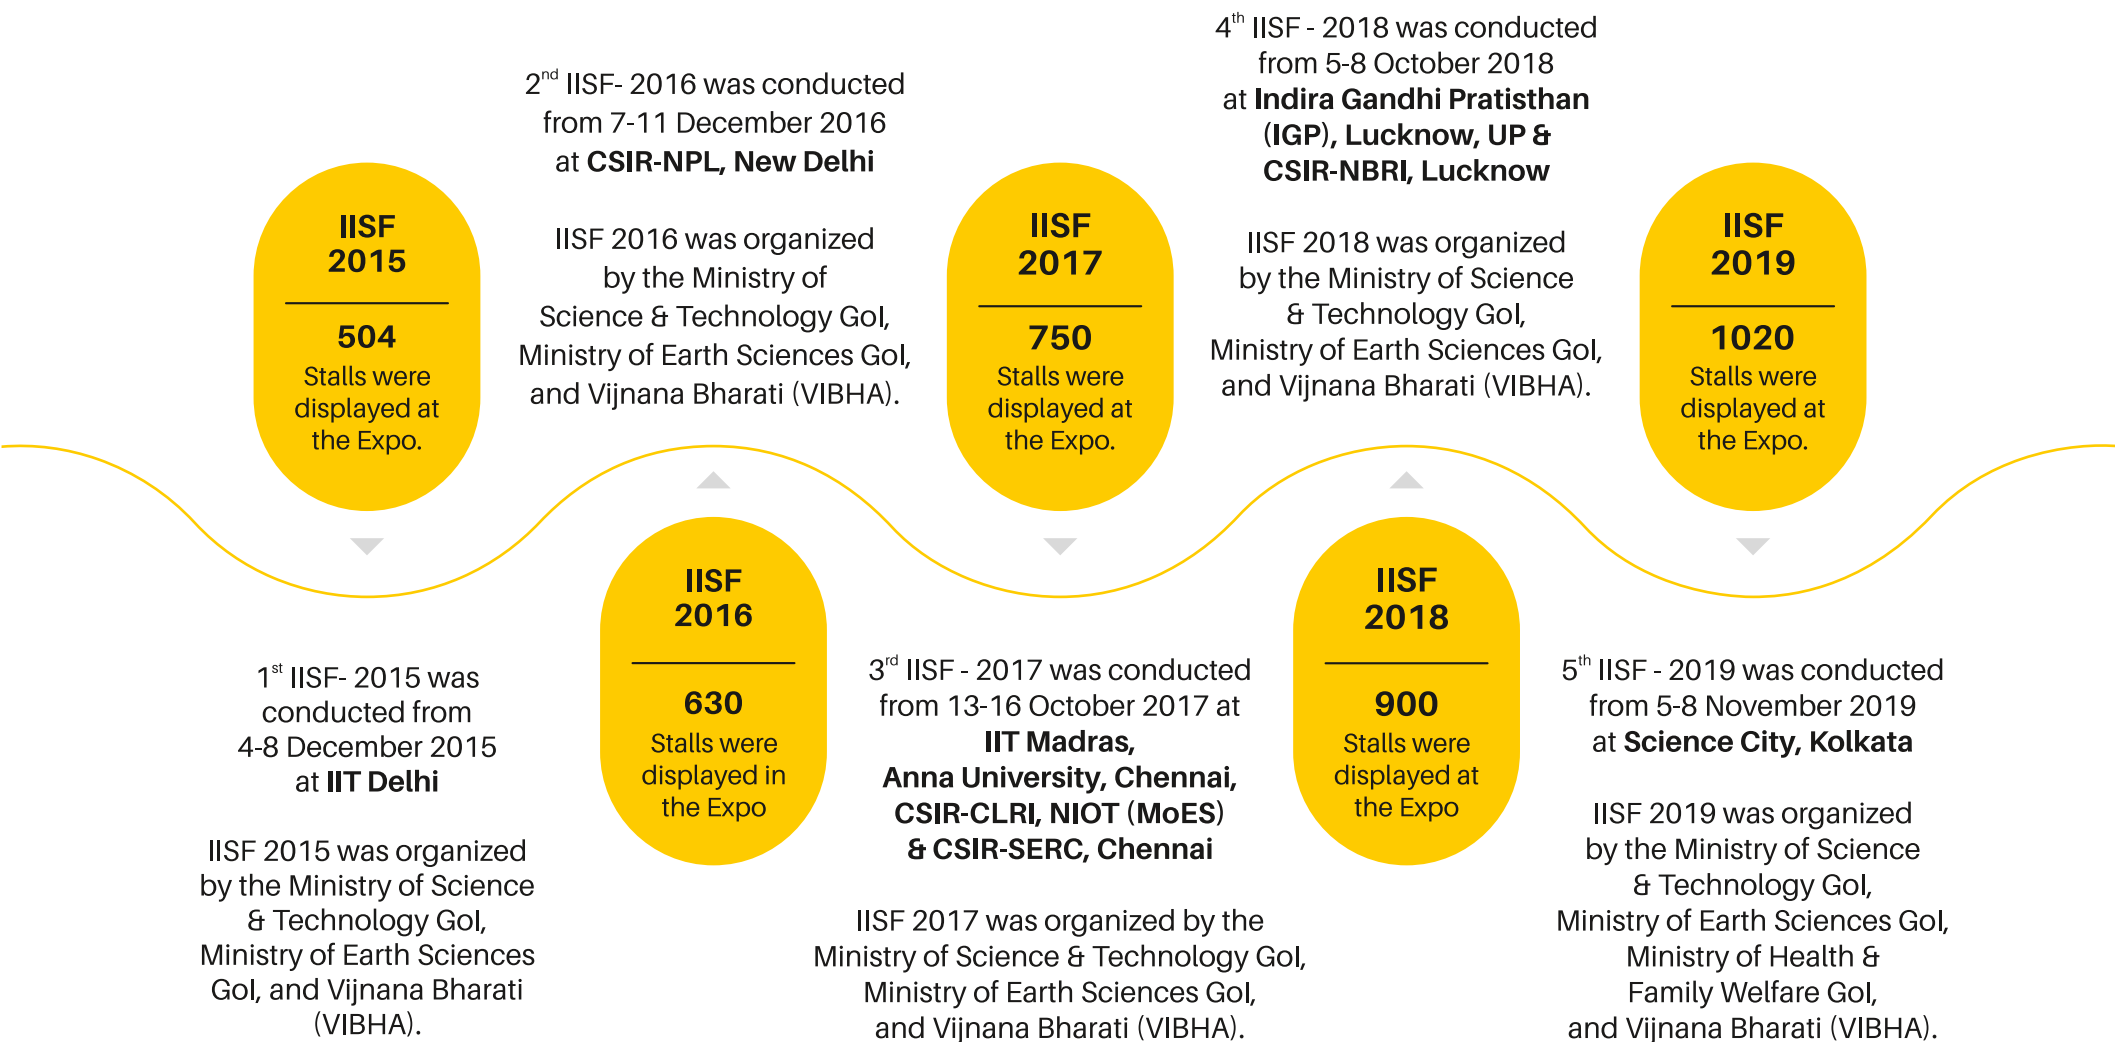

The series of IISF is an integral part of India's long term vision of developing and widening the spectrum of scientific temper among various stakeholders of our society, wherein we celebrate the achievements of India's scientific and technological advancements with our nation-builders like students, innovators, craftsmen, farmers, scientists, and technocrats. The IISF festivals have been increasingly recognized as the country's largest single platform where scientific fraternity and industrialists get premier opportunities to showcase & exchange their innovations & technological solutions for the overall growth of our country.

IISF intends to promote Science-related careers and demonstrate how science can help India become a developed country in a very short span of time. Since 2015, the Ministry of Science and Technology and Ministry of Earth Sciences- Government of India, in association with Vijnana Bharati (VIBHA), the largest science networking organization in the country, has galvanized the mass to organize the IISF. So far, seven IISFs have been held successfully.
